| Monthly Revenue | Social Following | Report Date |

Collette, £8,463 in March, up from £6,984 in February. That is a 21% revenue recovery after February's dip and it puts you within touching distance of your £9,113 breakeven. Your sales execution was the standout - you closed every single call you took. 4 from 4, 100% close rate. Content output tripled from 22 pieces to 66. Social proof nearly tripled. You secured your first upsell with Lina's coaching and shoot upgrade at £597. You opened new channels - Meta ads for the first time, postal referral letters, and QR-coded gift packs for shoots. In February I told you to finish the Personal Brand module, fix your email click-throughs, launch the group intake, push the price increase to £5.4K, get the VSL page live, and activate the 3.8K brand email list. The group intake got zero sign-ups and you pivoted to the Confidence Ladder challenge instead. The VSL got done in a different form. But several February actions are still unaccounted for, and you have told me yourself that March was scattered with too many half-started projects. The revenue and sales numbers are strong. The question now is whether you can stay focused enough in April to finish what you have started - because the webinar on the 30th is the biggest revenue opportunity in front of you.

01 - February Actions - Where You Stand

Last month I set you several priorities. Let me walk through each one.

Complete the Personal Brand SmartScaling module. You said in February you were on the last section. Your March submission does not mention it. Collette, this matters because the personal brand module contains the content strategy and CTA frameworks that directly feed your campaigns. If it is done, good. If it is not, it needs finishing this week before you launch anything else.

Fix the email click-through problem. In February you flagged 35-55% open rates but zero click-throughs. This was not addressed in March. Instead your email list dropped from 4,559 to 2,804 - a 38.5% decline. If that was an intentional clean of the 3.8K brand list, fine. If it was organic loss, it is a problem. Either way, 32,533 emails went out in March and we need to understand what the click-through situation looks like now.

Launch the group intake. You launched it - and got zero sign-ups. You then pivoted to the Confidence Ladder challenge, which is a better structured approach with Meta Ads running alongside it. Good pivot. But the pattern of start-then-abandon is showing. The Confidence Ladder needs to get fully launched, not abandoned for the next idea.

Price increase from £4.5K to £5.4K. Not mentioned in your March submission. Did this go live? At your current revenue and with 100% close rate, a price increase is free money on every future sale. This cannot keep sitting in the plans pile.

VSL landing page. You said the VSL is now live for reels editing and content retainers. Different angle to what was originally planned, but it is delivered and that is a channel that could generate almost passive income through outsourced delivery. Well done.

3.8K brand email reactivation sequence. Not mentioned. You sent 32,533 emails in March - was this the reactivation? What was the result?

Portfolio and website update. Not mentioned. You had copy from Ranked AI ready to implement or build new pages. Where is this at?

02 - The Scatter Problem

You said it yourself: "Too many half-started projects. Focus scattered in March." Let me show you what that looks like from the outside. On top of the unfinished February actions, in March you started or are considering: Meta ads, Confidence Ladder challenge, postal referral letters, QR-coded gift packs, free webinar for 30th April, professional videographer for shoots, podcast add-on from content shoots, VSL plus Lovable page package, monthly Instagram assessments for clients, and automated client check-ins. That is 10 new initiatives on top of at least 4 unfinished ones from February.

Collette, you are not short of ideas. You are short of finished projects. Every one of those initiatives has potential. But none of them will work at 10% attention. The webinar on April 30th and the Confidence Ladder lead magnet feeding into it - those are your two revenue plays for April. Everything else needs to go into a parking list until those two are fully live and converting.

Your breakeven is £9,113 including a modest wage for yourself. Your retained monthly income is £4,260. That is a £4,853 gap. Revenue of £8,463 looks healthy on the surface but it is heavily PIF-dependent - £11,274 PIF versus just £1,970 MRR. PIFs are lumpy and unpredictable. Closing that breakeven gap sustainably means building more recurring retainer revenue, not stacking more one-off projects.

> The Rule for April
> If it does not directly support the 30th April webinar launch or directly generate revenue this month, it waits. No exceptions. Write down every idea that comes up and put it in a parking lot document. Review it in May. But do not start it now.

03 - Webinar Launch - 30th April

This is your north star for April. A free webinar with a warm audience and a proven 100% close rate when you get people on calls. The maths is simple - if the webinar books you 3-4 discovery calls, and you close at even 75%, that is 2-3 new clients. At your current pricing that could close the breakeven gap in one event.

Here is what needs to be in place. The registration page needs to be live now - every day without it is wasted promotion time. The Confidence Ladder lead magnet should be feeding opt-ins who then get invited to the webinar. Your email nurture sequence needs to take registrants from sign-up to show-up. The webinar content itself needs to deliver value and end with a clear coaching CTA. And you need a post-webinar follow-up sequence for people who attended but did not book a call.

You asked about boosting the webinar promo reel or carousel to your existing audience. Yes - absolutely do this. Your existing audience is warm traffic and will give you the cheapest conversions. Use Ads Manager not the boost button. Put budget behind the promo once the registration page is live.

You also asked about Meta ads creatives. Yes, add 2-3 more creatives to test alongside the existing TOFU reel. Your audience is too narrow - widen targeting to include broader interest groups. If CPA does not improve within 2 weeks, pause the cold traffic campaign and redirect the entire £30/day budget into webinar promotion. Do not keep spending on something that is not working.

04 - June Shoots Pipeline

You need 5 shoots for June and have 1 booked. That is an 80% gap with roughly 7 weeks to close it. You mentioned LinkedIn brand outreach could help and that PROSP is running but inconsistent. You also said the messages were too specific to health and fitness and need to be more generic to open conversations.

Here is the approach. Revise the PROSP messaging to be broader - lead with the value of professional content for any business, not just fitness. Your portfolio and past shoot results are your selling tool here. The VSL you built for reels editing and content retainers could become part of this funnel too. Every brand conversation on LinkedIn should end with a portfolio link and a call-to-action to book a discovery call about the June shoots.

In parallel, ask every current client if they know a business owner who needs content. You are sending postal referral letters and gift packs already - make sure the June shoots are mentioned specifically in those materials. One referral from each of your 5 clients gets you close to target.

This needs 30 minutes of focused outreach every single day. Not when you remember. Every day.

05 - AI Adoption - You Are Moving Fast

Collette, I need to acknowledge something here. The speed at which you are adopting AI is genuinely impressive. You are already using Claude co-work to draft weekly emails, you are thinking about automated check-ins, you are looking at feedback pipelines and clip review systems. Most people at your stage are still figuring out how to write a prompt. You are already building workflows. That is worth recognising.

But here is the honest coaching on it. The AI side is a shiny toy right now. Every new automation idea feels productive because it is interesting and you can see the potential. But none of it generates revenue directly. The co-work email setup generates revenue. The automated check-in reminders improve retention. Everything else - the video feedback spreadsheet, the AI clip review system, the asset delivery automation - those are optimisation tools for a business that is already running at capacity. You are not at capacity yet. You are at £4,260 retained against a £9,113 breakeven.

The priority is revenue first. Get to a point of growth where you can hire and buy time back. Then use that time for the automation projects. Right now, every hour you spend building an AI workflow that saves you 20 minutes a week is an hour you are not spending on outreach, webinar prep, or closing the next client. The maths does not work until you are full enough that time is genuinely your bottleneck rather than revenue.

For April, your AI priorities are two things only. First, finish the Claude co-work email setup and schedule the first batch of weekly emails. Your open rates are strong at 35-55% - you just need consistent content going out. Second, the automated client check-in reminders. You said things get missed or pushed back on HubSpot. Let us get a simple reminder system set up on our next call so nothing falls through the cracks. Everything else goes in the parking lot until the revenue gap is closed.

Before you go any further with AI, complete these three assessments. They will show you exactly where you stand and what to prioritise next.

06 - Revenue Mix - Push MRR

Your March revenue split was £11,274 PIF versus £1,970 MRR. That means 85% of your new revenue came from one-off payments. PIFs feel great when they land but they create a boom-and-bust cycle. February proved this - you dropped to £6,984 with zero MRR because no PIFs came in.

Every new client conversation should lead with a retainer or monthly option. Your content retainer service, your coaching packages - frame these as monthly commitments first, with PIF as the upgrade option for people who want to commit longer. Your retained income of £4,260 needs to be climbing toward £9,113, and that only happens through monthly recurring clients.

The upsell you secured with Lina shows you can extract more value from existing relationships. Look at every current client and ask whether there is a retainer add-on or service upgrade you can offer. Monthly Instagram assessments for clients was one of your ideas - that could be a retained add-on to coaching or content retainer packages.

Priority Actions

|---|---|
| 1 | Get the webinar registration page live this week. Every day without it running is wasted promotion time. The Confidence Ladder lead magnet should be feeding opt-ins who then get invited to the webinar. This is your single biggest revenue opportunity for April |
| 2 | Add 2-3 new Meta ad creatives and widen the audience targeting. If CPA does not improve within 2 weeks, pause cold traffic and redirect the full £30/day budget into boosting the webinar promo to your existing warm audience via Ads Manager |
| 3 | 30 minutes of June shoots outreach every day. Revise the LinkedIn PROSP messaging to be broader. Send the portfolio link to every warm contact. Ask every current client for a referral specifically mentioning the June shoots. Target: 3 of 5 booked by end of April |
| 4 | Finish the Claude co-work email setup and schedule the first batch. Your open rates are strong - you just need consistent content going out. This is a quick win that compounds weekly |
| 5 | Answer these open questions from February: Did the Personal Brand module get finished? Did the price increase go live? What caused the email list drop? What happened with the 3.8K brand reactivation? Where is the website update? Bring the answers to our next call |

Final Word

Collette, the numbers in March tell a clear story. When you focus, you deliver. 100% close rate. Revenue up 21%. Content tripled. First upsell. New channels opened. The capability is not the question - it never has been. The question is whether you can resist starting the next thing long enough to finish what is already in motion.

The webinar on April 30th is your north star. The Confidence Ladder lead magnet feeds it. The Meta ads promote it. The email sequence nurtures it. Everything else waits. You are £650 away from breakeven on a good month. One more retainer client closes that gap. But you will not find that client if your attention is split across 14 different projects.

Finish the webinar infrastructure. Do the daily outreach for June shoots. Close the open loops from February. Park everything else until May. The results prove you can do this. Now prove you can stay the course. I will see you in the next report.
